THE HOUSEHOLD.

OLD-FASHIONED CIDER APPLE SAUCE
—Boil a five gall brass kettle of sweet new cider to a rich syrup. Fill the kettle with peeled and cored sweet apples and cook slowly till the apples is nearly as clear and ready as jelly.

SQUASH PIE—This recipe for a squash pie will be found all right.
Equal quantities of squash and apple.
Strain them when boiled, and add 1 egg to a quart of squash; milk, rose water, sugar, spice, etc., to the taste.

CREAM SLAW—This is an appetizing addition to an autumn luncheon.
With one-half head of cabbage, finely shaved, should be mixed 3 tablespoonfuls of sweet cream and 3 of sugar, with pepper and salt to taste, and 1 pint of vinegar.

CREAMED POTATOES—Take eight large potatoes, remove the eyes and all specks, and boil in salted water until done. Then place in a bowl with 1 pound of butter, salt and pepper; add a gill of cream. With an egg beater whip to a cream. Remove to a hot dish and serve immediately.

LEG OF MUTTON STUFFED—Make a stuffing with a little beef suet chopped, some parsley, thyme, marjoram, a little grated lemon, nutmeg, pepper, salt, and a few bread crumbs; mix all together with the yolk of an egg; put this under the skin in the thickest part of a leg of mutton under the flap; then roast it, and serve it at table with some good gravy in the dish.

A SPIDER SHORT CAKE—Two parts rich buttermilk and one part sour cream, salted to taste, and sugar to taste, and a few bread crumbs. Roll out in inch-thick, round cakes, the size of a fry pan, crease the top with straight lines and bake in spiders over the stove. This is good for a breakfast dish on some of these cool mornings.

QUARTER OF LAMB ROASTED—Take fore-quarter of lamb, lard the upper side of the joint with lean bacon, and sprinkle the other side thick with bread crumbs; then cover with paper to prevent the meat from being burnt, and roast it. When nearly done, take it from the fire, and cover the part that has been larded, a second time, with bread crumbs, seasoned with salt and parsley chopped very fine; then put the lamb before a bright fire to brown it.

HOMINY CROQUETTES—Hominy croquettes made thus are excellent for a chilly morning breakfast: Add to a cup of fine grained, cold boiled hominy one tablespoonful of melted butter, stir hard and moisten slowly with a cup of milk until of a soft, pasty consistency; add one tablespoonful of white sugar and a well-beaten egg.
Roll with the hands well-floured into oval balls, dip into beaten egg, then into cracker meal, and fry in boiling hot lard.

AN EXCELLENT HASH—Pick meat from turkey or chicken bones, shred, add dressing and what gravy may be left, with small pieces of biscuit cut fine; heat in oven over twenty minutes, when thoroughly moistened with water all will agree "that was a splendid turkey." The final picking of the bones is a dry dish, but served in this way the dryness is not there.
The remnants of a fowl may also be treated as escapalot oysters—a layer of shredded or minced meat, then a layer of crumbs.

GLAZED HAM—This is liked by nearly everyone; it should first be slowly simmered until thoroughly done.
Two or three small onions and a small handful of whole spices should be thrown in with it when it is about half-done. Loosen the rind, replace, and leave in its liquor over night.
In the morning remove the rind and brush the entire ham with well-beaten egg. Make a paste of a cup of powdered cracker and rich milk or cream, salt and a teaspoon of melted butter.
This must be evenly and thickly spread over the ham, which is then set into the oven to brown.

PUMPKINS—Pumpkins call up classical memories and pumpkin pies have a flavor of antiquity. The Jews cultivated pumpkins under their kings, and they were esteemed garden vegetables with the Greeks and Romans.

They were grown in the gardens of Charlemagne, and the monks of the Middle Ages were famed for their skill in cooking pumpkin pies, so says De la Croix in his ponderous volumes.
The fact does not take away any of the relish that we may cherish for any of the dishes that can be prepared from the valuable cucurbita pipio.

It is now the pumpkin season and the housewife already knows that she has the possibilities beyond Jack-o'- lanterns and pies. They may be cut into small squares and baked in the oven until slightly brown, and rival sweet potatoes. Also in stewing pumpkins for to-morrow's pies, reserve about a cupful for the "body" of to-day's custard. It will be a vast improvement. We do not wish it to be sheered at. A warm one rightly made is excellent eating. This recipe will be found a good one. Take five quarts of sifted and stewed pumpkin and sweeten with molasses to taste, no rule given, as pumpkins vary so in sweetness. Add a teaspoonful each of cinnamon, allspice and nutmeg, and a pinch of salt. Fill the pan with an equal quantity of sweet milk and stir thoroughly. Bake with an under crust by a slow fire.

SHOULDER OF MUTTON STEWED WITH OYSTERS—Let it hang for some days then salt it well for two days, bone it, and sprinkle it with pepper and a bit of mace pounded, lay some oyster over it, and the meat up tight and tie it.
Stew it in a little water, with an onion and a few pepper corns, until it is quite tender. Have ready a little good gravy, and some oysters stewed in it; thicken it with some flour and butter, and when the tape is taken off the mutton, pour the sauce over it; be careful to keep the stewpan closely covered.

One sometimes tires of this regulation routine, and as a pleasant variation of the monotony 1 pound of cold mutton can be converted into sausage by mixing it with 3 ounces of beef fat, 1 pint of minced oysters, 1 pint of minced anchovies, and seasonings of thyme, marjoram, salt and pepper.
These ingredients should be thoroughly incorporated and moistened with the separately beaten whites and yolks of two eggs, thus forming a stiff paste, which may be formed into sausage cakes and fried.

Another nice way to use remnants of mutton is to hash them. Fry a minced onion in butter until brown, stir in a tablespoonful of flour, add a broth or stock to make the sauce, a dash of vinegar, salt, pepper and spices to taste. Bring this to a boil and strain, and when cold add the slices of meat and a goodly allowance of sliced pickle. Warm the whole by gently simmering and serve with sip-ettes—slices of bread three-eighths of an inch thick, shaped into arrowheads, or triangles and fried golden brown in butter.

In most well managed households it is a matter almost of necessity to keep cold meat—roasted or boiled—always on hand. In the event of an unexpected influx of company after the customary day's supplies have been gathered in, it will "piece out" very nicely and vary the ration.

Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, in a long letter to the London Chronicle, says he is delighted with the cordiality and heartiness of the reception accorded British delegates to the Ecumenical Conference at Washington. "He says:
"The peculiarly intense brotherliness existing among the American Methodists is a quality charming and blessed beyond all praise."

NOVEL USES OF ARC LIGHTS.

Are lights have served many uses outside of conventional methods of illumination, not merely in connection with the good work of attracting and then singeing quarts of small bugs with big names, but their actual application has been at times quite out of the usual course of events.

An arc light is not usually regarded as equivalent for a rifle, although one recently served such a purpose without causing any injury to life. Two steamers were racing on Long Island Sound, and when in a somewhat difficult channel the captain of the slower steamer bethought himself of the search-light, which was trained on the pilot house of the rival, causing the dazzling of eyes that careful navigation was out of the question; and, although great spectacles and irreverently accented speech were fairly tried, it became necessary to diminish speed and let the other boat pass.

The electric light doubtless saved life, (and also the race); because, following the custom of the good old times under such circumstances, the captain would probably have adopted the Western river custom of taking a rifle, going well forward among the freight and picking off the pilot before submitting to defeat, or, if unduly merciful, he might have contented himself with merely passing the bullets into the pilot-house in such a way as to chip off the woodwork around the pilot by the way of vigorous hint.

Electric lighting has been applied to races equitably to the interests of all parties in horse trots at night, where the races were all right, but the people did not conform to the unusual change in hours.

The actinic rays in arc lights render them very useful in methods of photography other than those of portrature. In the numerous applications of photography, in copying and engraving, uniform effects can always be obtained and the work constantly carried on at will independent of the sun—comfortably taking the weather as it comes, whether one has a Far-more's Almanac or not.

It is not generally considered that light is necessary to find a fire, but an arc light is to be credited with such work in revealing a fire in the upper part of the public building in Philadelphia, in the summer of 1883, when an arc light hanging over the courtyard illuminated the smoke curling from the fire before any flames were visible to those on the ground.

In the same city arc lights served a very useful purpose in guiding the fireman around the lower part of a building which was burning above.
The globes were of the cup shape, and readily catching the water from the streams leaking through the building, present the strange aspect of light burning under water.

I do not recall any instance of the use of arc lights in surgery, although an attempt was faithfully made in the direction at the time of the assassination of President Garfield. The circumstances related by one of those engaged in the preliminary (and final) experiments were as follows:

The surgeons were very much embarrassed by their failure to determine the position of the bullet in the body of the President, and some one considered that if a powerful beam of light could be concentrated upon his person it would reveal the bullet visible. Several naval officers at the Washington Navy Yard gave the insuffice to say that the proposed method of treatment never brought to the attention of the surgeons, as at first contemplated.

Numerous experiments have been tried with a fair degree of success in hastening the growth of fruits by the use of electric lights; but transportation from further South is a very good means of obtaining early fruits.
In certain agricultural districts given to the cultivation of small fruits, the arc lights in villages and towns are used without globes in order to encourage insects among insect pests.

extent necessary for making the trial, and, standing upon the spot marked for the focus, the large arc light was lighted and the mirror swung into position. At this point the subject gave a leap further into space than any wayer could have tempted him, and drove into incalculably enduedured to express his surprise at the abuse to which he had been subjected by searing his back without notice.
In fact, nothing but hobbled feet from neglected clothing prevented him from endeavoring to make summary reprisals upon the experimenters, who in turn were equally surprised, as their work had been based upon the assumption that there was no heat in the illumination radiating from arc lights.
Suffice it say that the proposed method of treatment never brought to the attention of the surgeons, as at first contemplated.

W. S. RICHART.

Tennessee mining troubles at Briceville and Coal Creek resulted Friday night in the burning of the stockades at those points and the release of the convicts by free miners. Three thousand men surrounded the stockades and liberated 320 prisoners. The convicts were given citizens clothes and most of them started for the Kentucky line. The wires were cut by the miners and the details of the delivery are meager.

The Kentucky Training School has received its quota of guns from the State, and we may now expect the boys to put up a "sure enough" drill. Major Fowler assures us that no cadet will be allowed to bring a cartridge on the place nor take a gun from the grounds. This step he considers necessary on the grounds of safety, and he is right. He issues a standing invitation to all people interested in education to visit the school and see the work done, including the daily drill, which takes place at 10 a. m.

We regret to note the fact that Mr. C. W. Carpenter, the wide-awake dry goods dealer in Masonic Temple, has decided to leave Mt. Sterling, and will go just as soon as he can sell out or reduce his stock sufficiently. He will have no auction, but will sell, as will be seen in his advertisement, at auction prices in all departments of his immense establishment. He is a good business man, a clever gentleman and Mr. Sterling can ill afford to lose him.

Miss Mary Rafferty, aged 23, died at the home of Mr. Peter Kelly, near this city, on Friday night, Oct. 30th. She had for some time been a sufferer from that dread scourge, consumption, and patiently bore all the pain and suffering dealt out to her. For the past seven years she had made her home with Mr. Peter Kelly, and was a true and good woman. The burial service was held in the Catholic church on Sunday afternoon; burial in the Catholic cemetery.

Dr. L. C. Jeffries and wife are now pleasantly located at Mr. S. W. Gaitskill's, on Howard Avenue, where they will be glad to see any of their many friends. The doctor and his wife will endeavor to make their home with their daughter, Mrs. Gaitskill. A well-spent life entitles this grand old couple to a season of peaceful quiet before they go to their final reward. If success in life is to be measured by the good deeds we have done, then truly they have not lived in vain, for the neighbors and friends among whom they have spent a long life of usefulness, say their good deeds are without number.

J. Talbott Jackson, a student of Central University, Richmond, Ky., has won the Interstate oratorical medal in a contest at Charleston, S. C. The contending representatives were from North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Georgia and Tennessee. J. Talbott Jackson, the winner of the medal, is the son of Mrs. Liza Jackson, nee of the late Dr. John D. Jackson, of Danville, and a grandson of the Hon. Albert G. Talbott. He is a student of Central University, and an orator of no small note, having won the Chancellor's best speaker's medal at Central University at the June commencement, the Chautauqua medal at Lexington in August, and this last honor stamps him the foremost speaker of the South. Mr. Jackson on his return was met at the depot by a committee of his fellow-students in a carriage, and at night a banquet was tendered him.

DUN'S REPORT.

The Improvement in Business Still Continues.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Review of Trade says: The improvement in business still continues. It is greater than before at the West, considerable at the South, and is clearly perceived at the East. Yet discouragement in some branches of industry is not less, but more apparent than before, entirely because calculations have been made upon a more rapid and greater increase in business than have been realized. Premature expansion in some forms of production and of trade has involved the usual corrective, and the disposition exists so general that it might easily be misinterpreted.

No fears are entertained of monetary pressure throughout the East and West, and at most of the Southern points.

The money markets are well supplied for legitimate business and rates tend lower, while collections improve to some extent almost everywhere, but especially at the principal Western points. The failures this week 255, last week 249, last year 218.

Autobiography of "Bill Nye."

Edgar Wilson Nye was born in Maine in 1850, August 25, but at two years of age he took his parents by the hand telling them that Pleasantville County was no place for them; he boldly struck out for St. Croix County, Wisconsin, where the young man soon made a home for his parents. The first year he drove the Indians out of the St. Croix valley, and suggested to the Northwestern Railroad that it would be a good idea to build to St. Paul as soon as the company could get a grant which would pay them two or three times the cost of construction. The following year he adopted trousers and made $175 from the sale of wolf scalps. He also cleared 27 acres of land, and raised some watermelons. In 1854 he established and endowed a dissenting school in Pleasant Valley. It was at this time that he began to turn his attention to the abolition of slavery in the South, and to write articles for the press signed "Veritas," in which he advocated the war of 1860, or as soon as the government could get around to it.

In 1864 he graduated from the farm and began the study of law. He did not advance very rapidly in this profession, failing several times in his examination and giving bonds for his appearance at the next term of court. He was, however, a close student of political economy, and studied personal economy at the same time, till he found that he could easily live on ten cents a day and his relatives.

Mr. Nye now began to look about him for a new country to build up and foster, and in Wisconsin he had grown to be so thickly settled in the northwestern part of the State that neighbors were frequently found as near as five miles apart, he broke loose from all restraint and took emigrant rates for Cheyenne, Wyoming. Here he engaged board at the Inter-Ocean Hotel and began to look about him for a position in a bank. Not succeeding in this, he tried the law and journalism. He did not succeed in getting a job for some time, but finally hired on as associate editor and janitor of the Laramie Sentinel. The salary was small, but his attitude great, and he was permitted to write anything "he pleased." By and by he had won even a peach by his gentle, patient poverty, a tree, delightful parsimony regarding a speech. With a hectic imagination, and an order on a restaurant, which he carried in the paper, he scarcely cared through the liveliest day whether school kept or not.

Thus he rose to Justice of the Peace and finally to an income which is reported very large to everybody but the Assessor.

He is the father of several beautiful children by his first wife, who is still living. She is a Chicago girl, and loves her husband far more than she deserves. He is a pleasant to the outside world, but a perfect brute in his home. He early learned that in order to win the love of his wife he should be erratic and kick the stove over on the children when he came home. He therefore asserts himself in this way, and the family love and respect him, being awed by his greatness and gentle barbarism.

He eats plain food with both hands, conversing all the time pleasantly with anyone who may be visiting at the house. If his children misbehave, he kicks them beneath the table till they roar with pain, as he chafes on with the guests with a bright and ever-flowing stream of bon mots which please and delight those who visit him to that degree that they have hardly anything to eat.

In conclusion, Mr. Nye is in every respect a lovely char acter. He feared that injustice might be done him, however, in this biographical sketch, so he has written it himself.

RELIGIOUS.

The meeting at the Methodist church, in charge of Mr. H. C. Settles, of Louisville, is still in progress. On Wednesday Mr. Settles was called home to officiate at a wedding, and at night Rev. J. H. Williams filled his pulpit. On Thursday evening the several pastors of the churches in the city took charge of the services, and Revs. Bomar, Nave, Clark, spoke on crying evils that hurt the peace and good order of our community. Dr. Settles returned before the services of the evening were over, and has been preaching to a constantly growing audience. There has thus been a 6 additions, but the interest is daily increasing.

Doc. Parson's saw-mill, on Donaldson, caught fire on Saturday night. The mill was a portable one, and some neighbors succeeded by great exertion in saving a large part of the machinery, but about 10,000 feet of sawed lumber was lost.

Mrs. Sallie Bibb, wife of James Bibb, died at her home on Donaldson, in this county, on Friday, Oct. 30th, aged about 72 years. For some time she had been in ill health, and her death was not unexpected. A consistent member of the church, and a woman full of good works, she will be greatly missed by those who knew and loved her.

On Friday night Mr. J. W. Royter, near Lexington, lost some one in his hen house. He picked up his gun and went toward the barn, when three men came out. Calling to them he was answered by several pistol shots. He replied to this with a load of buckshot, when one man fell dead, and the others fled. The dead man, a negro, had six chickens he had just killed from the roost.

Central Music Hall seldom holds a larger crowd than the one that gathered there last night to hear the famous humorist, Mr. Nye was never drooler. He began the fun with his blind pig story, and read the story of the impossible boy, and for an encore he told how he made his first $3. Mr. Nye again read an original poem, "Regarding Autumn Leaves." He added several stanzas for an encore, and then caught the crowd with a line or two to the effect that New York was now so deep under the autumn leaves that the World's Fair Committee would never be able to locate it.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat, April 24, 1891.

Watson Lodge I. O. O. F. is a charitable institution that has done a vast deal of good during its long career of usefulness in our midst. In all this time it has never asked aid of the people. The loss of the building and the expense consequent upon rebuilding, has made such heavy drafts upon their treasury that they are just now a little cramped for money to re-furnish their lodge-room. The good women of the Rebecca Degree Lodge propose to aid them by giving an oyster supper on Thursday night. Now our people can help an institution that has spent many thousands of dollars in caring for the sick, burying the dead, providing for the widows and educating the orphans in our community. Spend a half-dollar with these noble women on Thursday night.

BILL NYE, RETURNS FROM EUROPE.

The Famous Entertainers Delight a Large Audience at the Armory.

A very large audience assembled at the Armory last night to hear Bill Nye, the eminent humorist, and his partner, A. P. Burbank, the famous monologue entertainer. The people expected much and were not disappointed. In fact all were delighted, and at the close of the performance, the audience in an uproar of laughter and was recalled on his every appearance. Burbank did some very specially fine work, both humorous and serious, and completely captivated his hearers. He was repeatedly recalled. On the whole it was one of the most satisfactory entertainments ever given in Carlisle, and will long be remembered with pleasure by those who were so fortunate as to be in attendance upon it. The special train from the east brought in a very large crowd, and there were many persons from other neighboring towns who came in on the regular trains, making in all something like 250 to 300 people from outside the city who were attracted here to hear the great attraction. All went away delighted and feeling fully repaid for the time and money spent in the journey.—[Danville (O.) Journal, April 6th, 1891.]

THE ADVOCATE.

ON AN OLD WOMAN SINGING.

Sweet are the songs that I have heard From children babbles and the building bird;
White sleep still held me in its arms
And early birds hummed everywhere
Their drowsy hum along the air;
From hunters and the hunting horn
Before the day star woke the morn; From boatmen in an armful of Where, richer than a puff of smoke,
The blossoms breath they drifted through Fall out of branches decked with dew.
And sweet the strains that come to me
When in great memories I see
All that full throated quiring throng
So streaming on the winds of song
Her who afar in upper sky Sounded the wild Valkyrie's cry;
With golden clash of shield and spear,
Shining for only gods to hear;
And her who on the trumpet blew
The "Angels Ever Bright and Fair";
Her voices, her presence, where the stood,
Already part of angelhood.

But never have I heard in song Sweetness and sorrow so strong Their being as hushed music rings Along vibrating silver strings—
When, with all her eighty years,
With all her eyes long quenched in tears, Little woman, with a look Like some flower faded in a book, Lived a thin and piping tone,
And like the quaver made her moan, Forgetful that another heard,
And sang till all her soul was stirred.
And listening, oh, what joy and grief Trembled there like a trembling leaf
The strain where first we thrilled the bars Beneath the priesthood of the stars;
The murmur of soft fallows;
Above dear, unassuming eyes;
The hymn where once her pure soul trod
The heights above the hills of God;
All on the quavering note awoke,
And in a silent passion spoke,
And made that tender tone and word
The sweetest song I ever heard.
—Harriet Prescott Spofford in Harper's Bazar.

Began Studying on the Farm.

Dr. C. C. Abbott, the well known archaeologist, began the study which he made his reputation when he was a farmer near Trenton. His farm occupied a knoll overlooking the wide lowlands along the Delaware, where the Delaware Indians and their predecessors undoubtedly resided in large numbers.
From the river banks and from the plowed fields scattered some 30,000 relics in clay, bone and stone, the product of the aborigines who once hunted, fished, camped and manufactured their implements and utensils there.

The larger part of his collections are in the Peabody Museum, at Cambridge.
His exhibits there number 27,000 pieces.
Dr. Abbott has been appointed curator of the American Museum of Archaeology connected with the University of Pennsylvania, and is now devoting his energy to this new museum, which already contains about 25,000 specimens.

Calculating Machines.
"Come and let the machine tell you age," said one young girl to another as they waited for a train at the station.
"So you believe that, do you?" was the response. "I think you wouldn't if you took a second thought. You see there are springs and things to press, and you get certain results. It is a sort of calculating machine, and in reality you can use it as you wish.
If you want any other date you can get it quite as easily by starting from any given day. If you are interested in reckoning machines, well and good, but don't be misled by the belief that such a bit of mechanism has reasoning or other faculties and could tell you anything you didn't know your self."—New York Ledger.

An Incident of Taste.
A St. Antoine street mother came stiffing into the house the other morning, where her youthful son was enjoying himself in his own way.
"Johnnie," she called, "are you smoking a cigarette?"
"No," he answered from behind the curtains, as he threw something out of the window.
"Yes, you are, too. I smell it."
"No," I ain't," he insisted. "It was only a cigar stump I found in the gutter."
"Oh," she said, apparently much relieved, "I beg your pardon, but don't you ever let me catch you smoking a cigarette. Do you hear me?"
"Yes," and Johnnie went out and restored the stump to its previous position.—Detroit Free Press.

Electric Registering Tills.
Some time ago an electric till was brought out in England which materially decreased the possibility of tampering, and at the same time afforded an excellent check on the day's receipts.
The inventor has made several improvements on the original device, which will now register accurately every cent received, from a cent to a twenty dollar piece. By a simple arrangement the till can be placed in any part of the store, and as an indicator it is said to work perfectly.—New York Telegram.

Pains That May Would Heal.
There are maladies which were not known fifty years ago. There were maladies which have gone out of record. But a malady of all ages is one known to capitalists only. The patient has pains in his cash box, in his ledger, in his pocketbooks filled with ballance. He suffers the tortures of a Shylock deprived of Portia of a pound of gold.—New York Times.

The old home of John Howard Payne is still in a good state of preservation.
It is a lovely dwelling with quantities of roof to it covered with many shingles.
There is a garden attached, in which hollyhocks grow, and there is a picture-ous old well near by.

The Garden in November.

Something should be done in the garden this month or as early next month as it can be got at. The apparatus stalks should be cut and taken off the bed. The old wood should be cut out of the currents, blackberries and raspberries, and they should all be liberally manured. It is also a good time to get cuttings from the best kinds to heel in this winter and set out next spring. Even if there are already enough it may pay to make new plantations and root out some of the older ones when these come to bearing. The rhubarb also wants manuring this fall, and where it has grown so thick as to make but small stalks, split the crown of the old root, and take a part of it away to start new beds. This is a profitable crop, especially in a spring when there have not been many apples carried through the winter. The strawberries need to have the weeds and superfluous plants taken out in preparation for the mulching which will need to be done later. The material for mulching should be gathered together and made ready against the time of need.—American Cultivator.

Queen Mary's Lapdog.
Mary Queen of Scots had a favorite lapdog, which is said to have been present at the execution of her poor mistress in Fotheringhay castle. After the royal lady had been beheaded the faithful creature refused to leave her dead body and had to be carried out of the hall by force. At that period lapdogs were the pets of men as well as of women. Dr.
Boley, a relation of the unhappy Queen Anne Boleyn, owned one "which," as it is written, "he doted on." Anne once asked him to grant her one wish and in return he should have whatever he might desire. Knowing his affection for the dog, she begged it of him and of course the doctor had nothing to do but to give it to her. "And now, madam," he said,
"you promised to grant my request."
"I will," quoth the queen. "Then, I pray you, give me my dog again."—Exchange.

You will observe that bragging is something very nearly universal. Those who do not brag are sure to be despising life degrading creatures. Both habits are unquestionably nonsensical. You are not the greatest genius under the moon; and if you were it would not be so sound a security as you are.
We forget our biggest men out of hand. If you will go through the schools today you will not find one boy or girl out of ten that can tell you who Napoleon was, or when he lived, and not as many who know anything about Daniel Webster. But just think what an immense amount of conceit there is and has been in human folk! What millions of braggers! What swelling and strutting! Oh, we fools!—St.
Louis Globe-Democrat.

Mrs. Gaswell—Yes, they do. I went into Antique, Design & Co.'s grand store today to get some furniture for the new home, and at first they didn't show me anything but a lot of old second-hand stuff that looked as if it had come over in the ark.—New York Weekly.

Perhaps you are run down, can't

PEN AND SCISSORS.

At Paris, Alexandre Dumas' new play, "The Road of Thebes," is awaited with interest. It will be brought out at the Comedie Francaise theater.

Our domain has extended until it is said that the sun never sets on the soil of the United States; that when it is 6 p. m. on Alton Island, Alaska, it is 9:30 a. m. at Eastport, Maine.

The time made by Wm. Windle, at Springfield, Mass., a mile in 2:15, is bringing the racing bicyclist close to the trotter at his best. Only the speediest nags beat the record of Windle.

It is unusual to see grain standing in the field ready to cut while three inches of snow covers the ground. But this could have been seen on the 1st day of October, 1891, in Snake River Valley, Idaho.

Fashionable women in Tacoma have organized what they call a rainy day club, the sole purpose of which is the encouragement of the sensible habit of wearing on wet days dresses which do not extend below the ankles.

A Roman inventor, Signor G. Guglielmini, has asked for a patent upon a mechanism which by an ingenious and simple contrivance, permits the utilization of the waves of the sea, as a propelling force.

The grand maneuvers of the French and German armies, where smokeless powder was employed, have caused in Italy the suggestion that the uniforms should be of a brown color, like the coat of a hare, which at a short distance is undistinguishable from the earth.

The cost of crime in the United States is very heavy. The annual cost of the police force amounts to nearly $20,000,000; the annual cost of prisons $5,000,000, and the annual cost of reformatory and industrial schools $3,000,000. The cost steadily increases, thanks to a nearly unregulated immigration.

Dante is still exiled—by Austria. In other words the police has refused admission to open at Trent the exhibition of designs for a monument to the divine poet, which would be later erected in that city. We say "would have been"—observes the Dirliton newspaper of Rome—because if Austria quarrels with plaster models, what will she do when it is a question of marbles!

David E. Smith, an octogenarian of Rowley, Mass., has purchased a piece of land, on which he proposes to erect, next season, a brick and stone building for a public library, to be presented to his native town. This will be the first brick building (except an old powder house) ever erected in the precincts of Rowley. Mr. Smith will furnish the library, equip it with books, and provide for its support.

Rev. Dr. R. S. Storrs in his annual address before the American at Pittsfield, last Thursday, made the following allusion to Phillips Brooks: "The churches begin to recognize that their great need is unity in Christ, not for Bishops in silk aprons or knee breeches. I do not refer to the noble Christian man confirmed yesterday in Boston. I have not the slightest doubt he will conduct his work for unity and a grander progress in this State. I would no more dream that he would stoop to peculiarities of dress than that one of your grand Berkshire clergymen would put on pantalettes."

For months past peculiar perturbations have been observed on the magnetic needles in the Greenwich Observatory, and careful observations reduced to a system. They might have been due to "magnet storms" in the terrestrial magnetism, or the solar atmosphere, but a more commonplace origin has been found for them. It appears that they exactly correspond in point of time with the starting and stopping of the electrical railway from the Monument to Clapman. The electricity used in the working of the line goes to earth, and although the Observatory is several miles distant, the delicate apparatus was sensibly affected.

The Masons and Catholics of Nyack, N. Y., are at swords' points. The former recently held a fair and invited a singer from one of the Catholic churches to participate in an entertainment on the evening. He promised to do so, but the priest of the church to which he belonged told him not to do it, and he obeyed the command. The Masons became provoked and stopped dealing with the Catholic merchants or contributing to Catholic fairs, and the Catholics retaliated. The quarrel has now got into politics and is having its effect upon the nominations that are being made in the assembly.

The attention of the Italian Minister of Education has been called to the fact that the best pictures of the great masters are kept concealed from the eyes of the public in the various churches which own them. Not only has the public no benefit of them, but the most precious works of art themselves are consigned to rot for want of light and air. The minister has therefore ordered that churches owning such pictures shall exhibit them where they shall not be deprived of the necessary amount of light and air. In some cases the government will pay the respective churches an annuity for exhibiting their art treasures to the people.—(Chicago Times).

The wedding of Miss Susie McKenna, of Brooklyn, has been indefinitely postponed, because of a peculiar malformation. While at her father's cottage in Lenox last summer, the young lady was thrown from her horse into a poison ivy bush. She said nothing about the accident until her system had become thoroughly undermined from the poison which had entered. The eyelids became swollen, and soon the left eye became totally destroyed. The right eye is now nearly gone, and her hearing greatly impaired. Miss McKenna's fiancée, a well-known lawyer in Brooklyn, is prostrated over the terrible condition of his intended wife.

The Boston Transcript justly concludes Carl Schurz mistaken in arguing that no harm will be done by German immigrants retaining their own language and customs. In preference to English, and gives these reasons: "The perpetuity of our institutions depends upon their power of assimilation. If separate nationalities, with separate customs, taste and education, be allowed to grow up unchanged from the condition in which they entered the country, where is that practical solidarity on which American institutions are supposed to rest? No break down all the barriers of language, old habits and Old World intrigue, and let the foreigners as he settles down to his part in the United States, do so without being hampered by former processes of thought and life."

This day personally appeared before me, a Justice of the Peace in and for the county and State aforesaid, Henderson Phipps, who made oath that two stray steers about four years old each, one a pale red, will weigh about 1,400 lbs, the other, dark red, will weigh about 1,500 lbs, neither of them having any marks or brands, were taken up by Henderson Phipps, near his farm, on the 19th of September, 1891. I further certify that I have personally examined the said steers and value them at eighty dollars. The taker-up of said steers, Henderson Phipps' residence is near Stepstone Station, Montgomery county, Kentucky. This notice has been duly recorded in my office, and a copy thereof delivered to said Henderson Phipps. This 6th day of October, 1891.

In Castles of Wood.

Perhaps the safest homes the birds have devised are the snug castles built—or rather cut out—by the woodpecker family. At any rate, it is plain that they feel so themselves, for their little folk are the boldest and most noisy of feathered babies. You will find that most young birds whose cradles are on the ground, or much exposed, are silent little fellows, rarely raising their voices above a faint peep. They seem to know their safety depends on their silence.

In nests that are higher the youngsters are not so prudent. The orioles, swinging safe from the branch of an elm, call and cry without ceasing; but loudest of all are the dwellers in tree-trunks. The flicker baby will stand at his door, a round hole in the trunk, for hours and shout at the top of his voice; if he did so on the ground he would be snapped up by many a prowler on the lookout for tender young nestlings to eat, not to speak of the race of mankind.

One who is acquainted with the interesting young flickers can always tell when they are getting ready to fly. One that I watched spent several days in his doorway, looking about and calling vehemently, hardly staying away long enough to sleep. This was in striking contrast to the conduct of his parents, who came and went as silently as though they had no voices. Not till he had flown were they heard calling and drumming on dead limbs. And the moment the youngling left the nest he seemed to understand that he was not so safe as at home, for he too became still.

The most persistent brawler I ever heard of in a nest is a young sapsucker, or yellow bellied woodpecker, whose voice may be heard anywhere near his tree from early morning to the dusk of evening. His home is in a dead tree, often with neither bark nor limbs left on, so it is perhaps the most secure of all; he seems at least to have no hesitation about making all the noise he desires.

There were other tree-trunk dwellers in the woods near where I spent last summer. Besides the flicker and the sapsucker, there were the red-headed woodpecker, and the downy and the hairy, the last two of whom are exactly alike except that the hairy, which is twice as long as the downy. I heard the infants cry away up of their stronghold, but I did not or so, as they till they could fly.

One day a young hairy woodpecker came flying out of the woods and alighted about fifteen feet from where I was sitting on the trunk of a tree. As he came he cried in a loud voice, "Pip! pip! pip!" and of course I kept perfectly still to look at him. He was not in the least afraid of me; indeed, he seemed anxious to show what he could do in the way of foot hunting. He went to work on the side of the tree trunk, tapping vigorously at bark, and when a bit of it fell, he leaned back and looked at it in the most critical manner. Then he worked at the hole he had made. He probed every crack with his beak; he turned his head and peered under the loose edges, then dug into the soft inner bark as if he were starving. Every now and then he captured something, or pretended to, and for fifteen minutes he entertained me that morning. Woodpeckers are among our most useful servants. Every one kills thousands of insects in the summer, digging them out of the bark and wood. If the woodpeckers were to stop their work, many fruit and shade trees would die. Yet because they cut holes in the bark, which scientific men who have studied them say does not injure the trees, farmers, and others who ought to know better, give the birds a bad name, and kill them whenever they can.—(Olive Thorne Miller in Christian Union).

We want every mother to know that cramp can be prevented. True cramp never appears without a warning. The first symptom is hoarseness, then the child appears to have taken cold or a cold may have accompanied the hoarseness from the start. After that a peculiar rough cough is developed, which is followed by the cramp. The best time to act is when the child first becomes hoarse; a few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy would prevent the attack. Even after the rough cough has appeared, the disease may be prevented by using this remedy as directed. The only safe way is to keep a 50 cent bottle of the Remedy in the house for use whenever the symptoms of the disease appear. For sale by T. G. Julian.

To their great surprise before the bottle had all been used she was a great deal better. Her face had been drawn to one side, but the Pain Balm relieved all pain and soreness, and the mouth assumed its natural shape." It is also unequalled for rheumatism, lame back, sprains, swellings and lameness. 50 cent bottles for sale by T. G. Julian.

THE ADVOCATE.

A Business Man's Advice to His Old Friends.

[Somerville, (Tenn.), Reporter and Falcon.]

EDITORS REPORTER AND FALCON: Will you have patience with an old citizen, and allow him through your paper to say a few words to his Democratic friends, and especially those of the Alliance. There is probably not an Alliance man in Fayette county who does not read the Reporter and Falcon, and I want to speak a few words of truth and sober earnestness to them.

I was for 25 years an active business man in Somerville, and have a deep interest in all that conduces to the growth and prosperity of the county. No sober, earnest, thinking man can hesitate for a moment to admit, to himself at least, that life and hope of the South rests with the Democratic party and the enforcement of the doctrines of genuine Democracy. The rule of Democracy is the fair and equitable rule of the white man, and means peace, prosperity and perpetuity to the country. There are no truer, more reliable or earnest Democrats to be found in the United States than those of Fayette county—men who have lived and fought for the tenets of Democracy, men who have given of their time, their money and their blood, to sustain and enforce the grand and saving principles that underlie true Democracy. You have fought and striven against fearful odds for 25 years, fought a noble fight, kept the faith without wavering, and now when permanent victory is within your grasp it cannot be that you will allow yourselves to be led astray by specious theories and false doctrines and follow new and self-constituted leaders whose Democracy is measured by their own selfish interests and is only as broad as their pockets are deep. Surely you are not willing to throw away and make useless all you have striven for for so many long and dreary years, full of discouragement and defeat, borne with the patience and bravery of true, earnest and patriotic men, allow all the fruit of these years of labor to be lost when within your grasp, by divisions and contentions introduced and promoted by men who are Democrats for revenue only, men who are guided and directed by the leaders of your direct foes. If you are real, genuine, heart-and-soul Democrats, you are so because you have faith and trust in the Democratic party as an organization. If you are such, why isn't the Democratic party good enough for you? What do you want with any other political organization? Cannot you be content to believe and follow the old leaders with whom you have labored so long and so well, and the party with which you have for so many years been identified? You have grievances, troubles, sore and hard to be borne, injustice without redress, but cannot you right these within the limits and by the aid of your own party? Can you do better with new leaders, men who have never before sympathized with you? I believe most fully and honestly in the Alliance and the necessity for its existence, as there is no class of men who more need organization and can do better work with it than the farmers, but are curb-stone farmers and new leaders safer and better to be trusted than the old leaders? It is a good time to "swap horses" when the current is bearing you away, the waves are swelling and tossing all around you?

I have passed the best years of my life with you, and in the ranks of the Democratic party there maybe, and is, need of reform—quick, sharp, earnest reform—but cannot this be better done on the old lines and with the old friends to help? Is it good, safe policy to go to other folks and other organizations to find your leaders and teachers? If you break up the Democratic party in the South and introduce negro rule and negro equality, have you bettered yourself? Can the leadership of the negro, the carpet-bagger and the pension-drawer be better for the farmer of the South than that of the old friends, even with their many faults? A man's own family and kindreds may have many false ideas, bad practices and erroneous views, but can he do better by giving himself into the charge and keeping of his deadliest enemies, faith through their promises and specious though their schemes may be?

If you have been disposed to hearken to the blandishments of these third-party leaders, listen to what one of them said recently in a speech not intended for your hearing or reading: a speech of Senator Peffer, a child and product of the Alliance in the North, who says: "If the Alliance should fail in everything else it proposes but should succeed in breaking up the solid South by absorbing a majority of the Democratic votes of that section, it will deserve the lasting gratitude of the whole nation. It will have accomplished what the managers of the Republican party have spent years of time and several million dollars in vain to do, and by so doing demonstrate its greater potency as a political diplomat."

Will you think of these things? You all know me, know that I have nothing to make in this contest; I am no politician and no candidate for office. I am merely a plain business man, who loves the people with whom I have spent the best years of my life and desire only what is for their good.

It is often better to endure the ills we have than to accept those whereof we know not; it is better to endeavor to reform evils by using the means which we have at hand and those we know and can use than to go further and fare worse by falling into the hands of strangers and sojourners. If the Republican leaders have cheats-outs that they wish pulled out of the fire by means of the third party fingers, let them have them for themselves and by themselves and burn their own fingers, not yours. Do not be persuaded to give up all you have so long contended for, and, uniting with negroes, carpetbaggers and new lights, allow harm and ruin to come to all that is near and dear to us.

The Democratic party has saved the country in times that are past and will do it again if the farmers and workmen will but trust and count it, instead of letting it fall into the hands of its enemies and the enemies of the South.

Will you seriously examine these things and see for yourselves who are the men who are seeking to lead you out of the Democratic party, what are their antecedents, and whether they are the men you wish for your friends and leaders? Don't be persuaded to descend and lose your weight and influence by giving up old associations.

Yours as a Democrat,
FRANK TRIMBLE.

LAND, STOCK AND CROP.

Thomas Hiale desires to rent his farm. See notice in another column. Corn is selling at $2.25 per bu. in the field in the Judy neighborhood.

Charlie Donohoe sold to Redmond 11 fat cattle at 5 cents and 6 "stags" at 4 cents, for November delivery.

Mr. John A. Thompson sold Redmond 50 fat cattle for November delivery at $4.85 per hundred.

Mr. John A. Thompson bought six head of feeders of Andy McJure, average 1,200 pounds, at $3.75 per hundred.

At the combination of Ferguson & Frazier, of Cynthia, last week sixty head of horses brought $11,945, an average of $196 per head.

George C. Case sold his crop of tobacco in Louisville the past week from $3.50 to $16.50 per hundred; average $8.40 per hundred.

Dr. C. W. Mathers sold 40 head of New York cattle—about the best buck that ever left the county, to Layson & Moore, for 4½ cents.—(Carle Mercur.)

Mason & Cluke shipped a car load of fat hogs to Cincinnati the past week, bought at $3.50. They also shipped on Saturday to the same place a car load of cattle that cost them 2 cents.

The want of rain is becoming a matter of serious moment with the farmers of this and adjoining counties. There are no life and lands about it, a serious loss is now staring the farmer in the face. The wheat that has sprouted will die from the want of moisture; it can't live.—(Henderson Gleason.)

The plan of keeping the cattle on the streets on court days is working splendidly. About 1,500 head of cattle were sold at the pens yesterday, and one of the largest dealers, who opposed the change at first, is now heartily in favor of it.—It is better for both buyer and seller, as all dealers will acknowledge when they become accustomed to the new order of things.—(Winchester Sun.)

The Montana Live Stock Journal says: "Evidence multiply to cause the belief that there is an actual shortage in the supply of beef cattle in the United States, as a whole, compared with a few years ago. This shortage is not confined to the northern range country, where we know the holdings are one-third less than they were in 1888, but in every grain-raising State west of the Alleghany mountains the decline in beef values has caused a curtailment in cattle production on the farms. More than a dozen States will be active buyers of feeding steers after the first of October, in the event of the crop maturing at its now promises to do."

The Danville Advocate reports the sale of the estate of T. M. Lillard, dec'd., on Wednesday, as follows: Farm of 430 acres of very good land to F. G. Robinson, for Mrs. Lillard's sons, $65.01 per acre. Ten shares of Boyle Bank stock were purchased by A. E. & R. D. Logan at $195.55 per share. 18 plain 2-year old cattle brought $2.25 per cwt; 2 sows and 15 pigs $15.25; 31 shoats $2.51 per cwt; 2 fat hogs $3.55; corn in heap, about 350 bbls. $1.96 per bbl; fodder 20 cents per shock; hay $17.90 to $20.50 per stack; milk cows, $20 to $25; 2 yearling steers, weight 750, $18 per head; 3 yearling heifers, $10.40 cents per head; 4 plain yearling steers, $13.50 per head; yearling horse mules, $61 to $64; 1 extra mare mule cart, $90; work mules $70 to $100; brood mares, none standard, $70 to $100.

For Sale.

Ten head of good jacks, from two to seven years old; also 30 head of good jennets. Call on or address, MASON & HENRY, Mt. Sterling, Ky.

One of the best and most reliable farmers in the Somerset neighborhood, this county, gives us the following item. He says two of his neighbors raised a crop of tobacco, and being unable to agree upon a house to which they should ship it they divided it stick about. The same hands prepared the tobacco for market, one party shipping his tobacco to the Growers' house, and the other to a rival tobacco warehouse in Louisville. He saw both lots of tobacco sell the same day, and the man who shipped to the Growers' house received $1.73 per hundred more for his tobacco than did his neighbor, besides a considerable saving in warehouse fees.

Two of Bath county's best known citizens died, the one on Friday evening and the other on Saturday morning. Both had aided in making history of their great and loved country, and within a few hours of each other these two friends and comrades gave up their earthly life and went before the Master to look into the mysteries of the untold beyond. Capt. James Ewing was born April 18th, 1811, and died at 6:30 p. m., Oct. 30th, 1891. Without a pain or struggle he peacefully passed into the great unknown. Born and raised, he also died, on the old homestead settled by his father when he came from Maryland many years ago. He never married, but lived to see the entire family of brothers and sisters, eleven in all go before him. He was at one time extensively engaged in the iron business at the old Bath furnace in partnership with John C. Mason. He served as Captain of Company G, Third Kentucky Infantry, in the Mexican war, and no more popular or better loved officer ever commanded a company. He was also a member of the State Legislature in the session of 49-50. To the poor he was a veritable benefactor. No one was ever turned away from him empty-handed.

He was borne to his grave on Sunday by the following comrades who had shared with him the perils of battle, under a fierce Mexican sun: John Powers, T. M. Parsons, J. W. Langston, Dr. P. White, Col. J. S. Hurt, J. F. Trumbo, Ben F. Burbridge and James Howard.

On Saturday morning Mr. W. C. Allen died at his home in Owingsville, aged 72 years. Some two weeks ago he was on a fishing expedition and returned home to take his bed from which he never rose. He served in the same company with Capt. Ewing, as his First Lieutenant. A devoted wife, son and three daughters, one the wife of Hon. C. R. Brooks, of this city, survive him. He had served his country as a legislator, and filled other positions of honor and trust, and enjoyed to the highest degree all his life long the confidence and esteem of everyone who knew him.

The ranks of those who carried our flag into Mexico with so much credit to themselves and honor to their country are thinning out fast. But few are left to follow their comrades to their last resting place.

* We want every mother to know that croup can be prevented. True croup never appears without a warning. The first symptom is hoarseness, then the child appears to have taken cold or a cold may have accompanied the hoarseness from the start. After that a peculiar rough cough is developed, which is followed by the croup. The best time to act is when the child first becomes hoarse; a few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy would prevent the attack. Even after the rough cough has appeared, the disease may be prevented by using this remedy as directed. The only safe way is to keep a 50 cent bottle of the Remedy in the house for use whenever the symptoms of the disease appear. For sale by T. G. Julian.

SUNDAY BY THE SEA.

Beneath the pine trees on the bluff
The hammock swaying to and fro,
The western wind comes whispering
A seaward message soft and low.
Beyond—the sea a tender blue,
Where golden sunbeams kiss and reach,
While lazy wavelets softly sweep Against the thickly strewn beach.
Afar against the shining sky,
With clouds spilling color and white,
A vessel lingers like a bird,
Southward to take its onward flight.
God's day, and his all constant sign
And soul of sweet abiding love, Lies in unchanging tender care
On earth, sunshine, soft and low.
Oh, then, whose waters white
Of loving truth forever flow, Give us the strength that all thy love
We come to recognize and know!
And when above our weary heads,
The many waters ceaseless roll,
Let us lie down in peace and sleep,
Nor leave wisdom the weary soul.

A CHINAMAN'S BABY GOD

This was told in the council room of the Chong Wah Kung Saw, when the incense sticks of the Sheng-tung were smoldering and the sacred fire of Chang-hung was burning before the shrine.

Moi Hing, who married a chian white woman, had become a father. He had left his long-gone wife in Kwang-tung and said he would never go back to the land of his emperor. He married a German girl when he came to New York, in Brooklyn, and so great was the wrath of her parents that he had to run away to New York with her and leave his laundry in the care of the Chinese. He had rented one room up near the roof of a four-story tenement in Park street, within the throw of a stone by a child from Mott street in the city of New York. He had a white man to live, and white men had lived there for years. Chinamen do not mind dark rooms, and the German girl who married Moi Hing made the best of her bargain by not complaining.

Around the yam bun and in the fan tan shops they call Moi Hing paan-tim-ke-yat, the Freckled One, because when the disease which the English call smallpox raged in the Chinatown district he came back to life like one whom the gods desire to reserve for a different fate. But his skin was no longer smooth. It showed the claw marks of the monster represented in the picture books as having eyes and claws of steel.

The men in the fan tan shops always liked to see the Freckled One come around, for they knew he would not go away until he left them all his money to keep until he came back. And he never failed very long.

They talked of these things because it came before the story told with excited gesture to the forty in the chion chies. The Freckled One had, when his face was smooth as that of a Peking bird, learned how to carve the things out of wood from a master of the art. He had learned so well that he used to carve the gods of the sea and of earth and of heaven for the shrines in the Chinatown district. But the chiu-tan monster who left marks upon the faces of his victims when he did not kill, had stricken Moi Hing down while he was at labor, and he was well again he could not bear to look upon the work done with sharp knives and skillful hands.

The baby which was born to him had blue eyes and hair like the fine threads of gold with which the people of Yat-poon-kook made wonderful embroidery. "The American God had laid things out to do in Kwang-tung under the master. But he found new subjects for his work, and instead of reproducing on the block of wood the delicate and intricate work of the sea gods with eyes like fishes and scales on their breasts, he carved out the images of children, with round eyes like the blue ones his baby had, and he put wreaths around their heads.

It was a wonderful piece of work, and he kept at it by the yellow light of his tang at night and by the gray light which came through the window during the day. When it was finished he set it on the floor against the wall, and he built a p'ang, or platform, in front of it, and upon this he made the baby's bed. At each corner were burning Joss sticks, and as the incense went up in a straight line he believed the God of the white people were satisfied.

All of his money he spent for incense offerings for the blue eyes, and he placed gifts before the platform—little tooth-hair, made of blue satin, which should be put on the child's head every day—and made garments of broadcloth silk and a cap with a red button at the third degree upon it.

The cousin in the laundry in Brooklyn proved unfaithful, and said there was no money there, and the hand of the evil one was laid upon the brain of Moi Hing. Hing saw strange things, and one day he walked on the street he talked to himself and cursed the men of his own race. He went into the fan tan shops and demanded the money he had lost last week before. In order to get rid of him they gave him a few pieces of silver. After the first visit, when they saw him coming, the keepers would say:

"Here comes the crazy Freckled One. Give him some cash or he will bring as bad luck."

The story of the Freckled One's blue eyed baby soon became common report, but no Chinaman ever saw the face of the child, so zealously was it kept hidden from curiosity. From want, the little

WHY DO YOU COUGH?

Do you know that a little cough is a dangerous thing? Are you aware that it often fastens on the lungs and far too often runs into consumption and ends in death? People suffering from Asthma, Bronchitis, Pneumonia and Consumption will tell you that.

IT STARTED WITH A COLD.

Can you afford to neglect it? Can you trifle with so serious a matter? Are you aware that

DR. ACKER'S ENGLISH REMEDY for Coughs, Colds and Consumption is the greatest remedy Modern Medicine has. It will stop a Cough in one night. It will check a Cold in a day. It will prevent Croup, relieve Asthma, and cure Consumption if taken in time. You can't afford to be without it. A 25-cent bottle may save your life. Ask your druggist for it, or write to W. H. HOOKER & CO., 46 West Broadway, New York, for book.

German mother grew thin and pale. They had their bowl of rice three times a day, and sometimes the Freckled One would bring from the restaurant some chan chee gait, the feet of a sow, suckling. But he had no eyes for the suffering of his wife, nor would he listen to her just complaints. He spent most of his time in the worship of his little white god, as he called the baby. The Chinese society would have helped him had he made known his wants, but he scorned all who spoke the language.

This story filled the forty who listened with amazement. They had known nothing like the case of the Freckled One who accused and cursed his own race. And the teller came to almost the last, and said that Moi Hing must be sent back to the hills of Kwang-tung, for even now his spirit was seeking release from a worn out body.

He told how Moi Hing had worshipped all one night before the platform, and called the blue eyed baby a white god, destined by heaven to grow up into a fine woman and deliver the Chinese from the rule of the imperial dynasty, in fulfillment of the prophecy made more than a thousand years ago.

Wearied with his devotions, Moi Hing had at last fallen asleep. The little German wife had wanted to take the baby to her bed, but he had said no. So, when he was asleep, she who had been waiting crept out of bed toward the shrine and took the baby in her arms. It was cold, and still, and she nestled it close to her breast, as mothers always do, and smiling at her treasure, fell asleep.

Two hours had passed by when she awoke up again. The baby had not moved. Its legs and arms were cold and rigid, and the eyes were half open. It was dead. She lifted the wee bit of baby and kissed it as usual, and would give it some of her own life. She called it her young, and her tears fell upon the wings of golden hair.

The scold of her grief came to the ears of her sleeping husband. He crawled to his knees and made an obeisance before the shrine. The Joss sticks burned down to the base, and he had gone out. He jumped to his feet with a cry like an animal at the fatal shot, and rushed into his own room. When he first time, he saw the child was gone. He saw it in its mother's arms. He snatched it from her and felt its cold body. Like a man he rushed down on the bare floor with the baby still in his arms.

When he struggled to his feet like a man upon whom the yen yen is strong, his wife was gone—he had fled in terror. With a hatchet he chopped the shrine to bits and laid waste the furniture.

The ones who had been told this strange story by the German wife found him in the room with the baby. After the funeral he went to Brooklyn. He will go back to China, but will remember nothing. They call him the Idiot.—Fred A. Wilson in New York Evening Sun.

Telemachus in the Metropolis. Telemachus, the Hellenist, fell asleep in the grass near the thirteen trees planted by Alexander Hamilton. Telemachus is cold and not handsome. His face is tanned and marked like a book worn folio of Stephanus. His forehead, with its thick eyebrows, is exactly similar to a newspaper or a book.

He had been thinking marginal notes on his rare copy of Pindar, and the book was open by accident among men on their way to the tennis ground, so prettily dressed that they were as if made of sugar, marmalade and whipped cream, smiled, not with malice, but amused.

Their companions, the eldest under twenty, charming as are girls not disillusioned by the cooking school, the keeping of house accounts and other commonplace things, stopped. One of them opened her scarlet sunshade over his head, another picked up his precious book and read in soft, enchanting tone until Telemachus awoke, and then she greeted him in Greek that her friends repeated in chorus. There is no happier man than Telemachus, and none so sure that everything is modern.—New York Times.

Brazilian Coffee. Advice received from Brazil by the bureau of the American Republics show that the amount of coffee received at the port of Rio de Janeiro for two months ending September 30, 1891, was 842,054 bags. The total shipments during the same period were 742,456 bags, of which 496,000 bags went to the United States. During the same period there was received at Santos 323,391 bags.

He's Still a Watchful Parent. Years don't count for much with the vigorous and seasoned noddie of the state of Maine. The story comes from Kennebunkport that Captain Benjamin Thompson, aged ninety-eight, recently repaired the roof of his barn without aid. He refused to accept the assistance of his grand-nephew, being afraid "that the boy might hurt himself."

The South African diamond business seems to be prospering. One company at Kimberley is said to have made $500,000 in a year.

WAS POPULAR IN AMERICA.

The Late German Minister Left Many Friends to Mourn His Death.

Count Ludwig Von Arco-Valley, whose sudden death at Berlin was recently reported, was secretary of the first legation sent to the United States by the United German empire, and was so popular that when he came again as minister he was welcomed to New York and Washington like an old citizen returned.

He was but forty-six years old, was unmarried, handsome, dignified, unusually well informed and a connoisseur of the world in the best sense of the word.

He spoke the principal languages of Europe as fluently as his native German, and had studied the various countries in which he had served with such success that his conversation was an intellectual banquet. He was by birth a Bavarian, but took the Prussian view of the controversy which began some twenty-five years ago, was active in creating the new empire and got high rank at once in its service. He became a diplomat as soon as he left college, represented Bavaria at Rome and as soon as the minister was complete accompanied the German minister to the United States as secretary.

He served the empire next at Vienna, Madrid, Paris and London as secretary, then was chargé d'affaires at The Hague, councillor to the legation at Rome, and general in Egypt and finally, in 1888, was made minister to the United States. He was at home on a short leave of absence when an illness broke in his stomach, from which he had long suffered, suddenly developed sufficiently to cause death.

Bees as Burglars. It appears that the monarchies of bees, well governed as they seem to be, are afflicted, nevertheless, by organic criminal classes—sneak thieves, highway robbers. Some of the bees go in for strong lands to plunder and are able to storm and sack a hive after the slaughter they carry all provisions home. Some colonies of bees never work; they live entirely by robbery and murder.

There are also thieves who creep unperceived into strange hives to steal honey. If successful they return afterward with hordes of burglar booty, break open the hive and carry away the contents. But the most curious fact is that these bees can be artificially produced, according to Buchner, by feeding the larvae upon honey mixed with brandy.—London T.Y. Hints.

How the Kangaroo Uses Its Tail. The common opinion that kangaroos use their strong, muscular tails as a means of propulsion in their flying leaps, which often cover from twelve to thirty feet each, is at once seen to be fallacious by any one who joins in a kangaroo hunt. When sitting erect in attitude of observation the tail is used as an important factor in the support of the body, and when the animal is feeling that it wishes to move about in a leap, it drags simply over the earth.

In running, however, it is curved gradually upward to clear the ground, and never once touches it during the kangaroo's flight, being seen to fulfill the office of a balancing pole and preserving the animal's equilibrium by shifting positions according to the nature of the ground.—Boston Journal.

The Telephone in New Brunswick. The telephone has an enviable reputation in one family at least. An old farmer who keeps a summer boarding house on the St. John river, in New Brunswick, was asked by an American how letters should be addressed to reach him. "Oh, don't put the letters," he said, "there's a telephone up to the house. Whenever you want me, just call me up and my wife will answer you." "But," said the other, "I'm an American, and I may want to write you some time." "Well," answered the Canadian, "then just call me up when you want me and I guess you'll get us." That settled the discussion right there.—New York Tribune.

The Eye Is the Mirror of the Soul. The human eye is indeed the mirror of the soul within, and no part of the face betrays so clearly the state of mind as do the eyes. The cold glare of greed, cunning aversion; the sneaking glances of the cringing hypocrite; the firm, straight look of the brave and strong; the restless motion of the anxious or fearful; the inquiring gaze, the hesitating, the angry, the smiling, the proud, the humble, and lastly, the joy's combining admiration, feeling and longing, and who knows what else besides.—Clatsop's Journal.
